

but, for babies in intensive care units, their days and nights are very different.

fight for their life with a loving family member by their side, a fierce advocate who provides much needed love and support.

But other babies are faced with the harsh realities of life, barriers that keep their families from being there as much as they want, and should be.

an uphill battle for both baby and parents.

And it shouldn't be fought alone or plagued by additional burdens It's why we provide these babies with the right to have their loved ones with them, 24 hours a day 7 days a week.

allows parents to be relentless forces at their child's bedside, with one less thing to worry about at the end of the day.
